PREFACE

Pakistan has an old tradition of census taking. The first attempt to obtain population data through enumeration was made in British India in 1872. Regular decennial censuses have been conducted since then in the area now comprising Pakistan. The first census of Pakistan was held in 1951 and the second in 1961. The third census, which was due in 1971, however, could not take place as scheduled because of the political situation in the country at that time and was conducted in 1972.

2. The population census is the "total process of collecting, compiling, evaluating, analysing and publishing, demographic, economic and social data pertaining, at a specified time, to all persons in a country or in a well delimited part of a country". It is the most important statistical activity undertaken for a country as a whole. It is an inventory of a country's human resources at the census time and provides data on size, distribution and characteristics of the population. The census data is considered highly essential for planning and carrying out economic and social development programmes, for determining administrative policies and actions, and conducting population research studies.

3. This publication presents the data on population in respect of the Baluchistan province as collected through the Big Count phase of the 1972 Population Census. The other population data, which was collected through the Housing, Economic and Demographic Survey has been published separately. The Big Count and the Housing, Economic and Demographic Survey taken together comprise the whole operation of the Population Census of 1972.

4. Pakistan has a federal constitutional structure with four provinces, which have been assigned the primary responsibility for planning and execution of projects and programmes related to education, housing, agriculture, industry, road transport, health, social welfare, etc. It is not possible for the provinces to plan and carry out development activities in these fields without having population data with all the necessary details. Secondly, even before the stress on development since independence, the British conducted censuses regularly after every decade in order to collect information for effective law and order machinery. This objective, though secondary, still necessitates collection of detailed population data for all administrative units down to each Mauza at regular intervals. Thirdly, the population data beside determining the number of federal, provincial and local bodies constituencies, is now the basic criterion for allocation of federal development funds and allocating federal jobs to the four provinces. Hence population data at the provincial level has immense operative importance.

5. This publication gives only the statistical tables. It differs from the 1961 publication which included description of data alongwith summary tables,, maps and charts. Although the addition of description, summary tables charts, etc. would have added to the utility of this report, but unfortunately this would further delay the publication which has already been inordinately delayed. Moreover, the Population Census Organisation is at present deeply involved in the 1980-81 Censuses. In order to prevent further delay, it has been decided to publish these tables for the time being and if time and resources permitted it might be possible to produce a detailed publication on a later date.
